Justice Trenchard Orders State to Pay Part of Appeal Cost

BULLETIN

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 19.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, the man convicted of the kidnap murder of the young Lindbergh baby and condemned to die in the electric chair the week of March 18, today won a respite from death of at least seven months.

The Bronx carpenter escaped speedy execution. His appeal from conviction was thrown before the state's highest tribunal, the court of errors and appeals. Hauptmann's New Jersey attorneys applied for and were denied a writ of grace by Chancellor Luther A. Campbell. The denial automatically placed the Hauptmann case before the court of errors and appeals.

The appeal ordinarily would be heard in the May term of the court, but the further appeal to the court of pardons possible, the death sentence, even if upheld, would not be executed until some time in September, or early October.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 19.—Justice Thomas W. Trenchard today granted the application of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted of the Lindbergh baby murder, to require New Jersey to pay the cost of printing the trial record for appeal purposes.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 19.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's urgent plea for prompt action on an appeal from his death sentence stirred up a controversy among his attorneys today and presaged an open break with Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsey.

Starts Appeal Procedure

Over the objection of Reilly, Hauptmann from the death house in state prison requested C. Lloyd Fisher, Flemington attorney and associate defense counsel, to start appeal procedure today. Fisher was signed on by Hauptmann, then, as "my chief New Jersey counsel."

Hauptmann's action tended to crystalize an uncertain state of affairs existing in the ranks of counsel. During the trial, reports of ill feeling between Fisher and Reilly were current.

The first move contemplated by Fisher was to request an order from Justice Thomas W. Trenchard to compel Hunterdon county, where conviction occurred, to defray the cost of printing the 1,600,000 word record for appellate purposes.

Reilly, after telephoning Egbert Rosecrans, another New Jersey defense counsel, said all appellate action would be delayed indefinitely

Operation On Heart Appears Successful

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, Feb. 19—A human heart continued to throb today after a delicate operation to relieve the angina pectoris which threatened to stop it.

The patient, whose name was withheld by Lakeside hospital, was operated on six days ago by Dr. Claude S. Beck, a member of the staff.

Dr. Beck severed one end of the pectoral muscle on the chest and fastened the severed end to the wall of the heart, hoping to provide a fresh source of blood for the weakened organ. Generally considered incurable, angina pectoris usually is caused by a hardening of the coronary arteries which furnish blood for the heart.

Dr. Beck had experimented with his method on animals for several years. The operation had never been attempted on a human being before.

Future Lawsuits On Bonds Predicted, But Both Sides Find Hope In Gold Decision

Wall Street Tries To Decide How Complete Was New Deal's Victory; Supreme Court Leaves Door Ajar For Possible Future Litigation

BY JOHN T. SUTER,
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—Amid the new deal jubiliation and world excitement over the 5 to 4 supreme court decision, under which all debtors could continue today to pay their gold clause obligations with present paper money on a dollar-for-dollar basis, there arose these developments:

Future Legal Battles

1. Some experts saw potentialities for future legal battles by holders of government gold bonds who might go into court seeking to show they had suffered actual losses in purchasing power by the government's abrogation of the gold clauses.

This view was based on the idea that the supreme court left the door ajar for future litigation when it ruled that congress acted unconstitutionally in wiping out the gold clause in government bonds but that John M. Perry, of New York, the petitioner in the case, had not shown or sought to show that he suffered damages.

2. While President Roosevelt was "gratified," Secretary Morganthau declared himself "very much pleased" and the administration tossed aside all its elaborate plans to meet an adverse decision, there was much speculation over the possibility of a new legislative step. Observers watched to see if the government would make any move to withdraw from holders of United States bonds the privilege of suing in the court of claims to collect damages.

Start New Drive

3.—Senate inflationists, led by Senator Thomas (D. Okla.) started a new movement to drive the value of the dollar still further down. Thomas praised the court decision, declaring it shows congress has "unrestrictable power in handling money."

4. Some other Democratic legislators thought the decision might be viewed as a brake on any inflationary tendencies. In their opinion the government might be called upon to pay huge damages to holders of its gold bonds if the value of the dollar should be sliced drastically.

5. A firm opinion that a bondholder would find it impossible to prove damages unless congress later orders the bonds redeemed in gold and permits a free market in that metal was expressed by an administration spokesman. He did not give his reasons, but some other financial observers thought there would be difficulty in proving how much if any change in the purchasing power of the dollar was due to the abrogation of the gold clause and, how much to other causes.

Hope For "Tonic" Effect

6. Wall Street and commodity markets after experiencing something of a frenzy of buying yesterday, hoped that the end to uncertainty over the gold cases would prove a tonic for the struggle back to prosperity.

7. There was no official comment on reports from diplomatic quarters in London that disappointed foreign holders of United States gold bonds might ask their governments to take diplomatic action. The state department sent a com-

Battle Crime Wave

DELAWARE, Feb. 19.—City and county authorities moved in two directions today to curb a crime wave. Mayor Sidney A. Rowland deputized a group of citizens to act as vigilantes to prevent further burglaries and county commissioners offered a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayer of W. A. Wilson, 78-year-old merchant, who was killed by a robber a week ago.

Held In Slaying

JACKSON, Feb. 19.—Thomas T. Plummer, 56, charged with the first degree murder of his 76-year-old landlord, John Steele, today faced a jury of three women and nine men.

Counsel prepared to begin introducing testimony.

May Reorganize

CLEVELAND, Feb. 19.—A reorganization plan, retaining present officers of the Cleveland & Sandusky Brewing company, will be placed before U. S. Referee William B. Woods in federal court, Edgar A. Hahn, attorney for the company, announced.

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER,
Associated Press Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Feb. 19—Wall street tried to decide today how complete was the new deal victory in the supreme court's gold decision.

Managed money exponents and others holding liberal economic views were encouraged by the strong endorsement given congress in its regulation of the value of money, and the sweeping aside of such obstacles to that power as the private obligations, estimated at some $87,000,000,000, specifically payable in a currency of fixed weight and fineness of gold.

Conservatives Hail Decision

On the other hand, conservatives hailed the part of the decision asserting that, while congress could abrogate private obligations which contravened its powers, it had no authority to abrogate its own obligations.

Even though the suit to force the government to pay in terms of the old dollar failed, because the plaintiff did not convince the court he had been damaged, the court found no grant of power in the constitution by which congress could "alter or repudiate its own contracts."

SENATE MONEY BLOC IN ACTION

Starts New Move Today To Drive Down Value of Dollar

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—Heartened by the supreme court's decision in the gold cases, the senate "money bloc" started a new move today to drive down the value of the dollar.

Inflationist forces gathered behind an amendment to the pending $4,880,000,000 work and relief bill, introduced by Senator Thomas (D. Okla.) the amendment seeks to decrease the value of the dollar through the issuance of silver money.

Thomas introduced it after the gold case decision, in which he held the government's authority to fix the value of money was completely sustained. It further complicated the legislative situation surrounding the administration's appropriation bill. An amendment to cash the $2,100,000,000 soldiers' bonus also must be faced by the Democratic leaders, in addition to the many issues in the bill itself.

Going After 26 Cents

Thomas said the supreme court's decision 'holds congress has unrestricted and unrestrictable power in handling money."

"The dollar," he said, "is now worth $1.26 based on the 1926 price level. We are going right ahead and try to get that extra 26 cents out of it."

His amendment is designed to raise the market price of silver to the statutory price of $1.29, at which time the treasury would be opened to the free and unlimited coinage of the white metal.

The methods proposed to reach this objective include:

1. Issuing silver certificates on the basis of the $1.29 value against the 400,000,000 ounces of silver in the treasury. This cost about 50 cents an ounce and currency has been issued against it only to the total of the cost price.

2. Forcing the federal reserve banks to issue $100,000,000 in silver

Tuberculin Fund Raised By County

LISBON, Feb. 19.—At the suggestion of the county medical society, county commissioners have appropriated $400 to be used in this county during the next three months in the development of a tuberculin dispensary.

Contact points will be maintained at East Liverpool, Lisbon, Salem, East Palestine, and probably Columbiana. The success of the activity during the three-month period will determine future appropriations for this cause by the commissioners, it is said.

The proposal was presented the commissioners by Dr. H. W. Bennett of this place, as a representative of the county medical group.

Sues Lumber Co.

TIFFIN, Feb. 19.—Mrs. Arthur C. Haugh, widow, today sought to collect $37,700 damages from the Fox Lumber & Supply company for the loss of her husband. In a suit filed here she alleged that Haugh's death was caused by lockjaw resulting from an injury he received when he stepped on a rusty nail on the company's premises.

Sheriff Is Named Oklahoma Warden, Succeeding Woman

(By Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 19—Sheriff Fred Hunt, of Tishomingo was appointed warden of the Granite state reformatory today succeeding Mrs. George A. Waters, the only woman warden of a prison for men in the United States. Mrs. Water's administration has been under fire.

The action of the state board of affairs, announced by Chairman L. M. Nichols, followed quickly upon the declaration of Gov. E. W. Marland that a warden's job is no place for a woman.

The board of affairs recently investigated charges of cruelty to prisoners at the institution and also probed the many escapes from the prison.

Only last Sunday 32 prisoners fled after killing a tower guard. Eighteen still are at large.

STATE ATTACKS KENNAMER PLEA

Insanity and Self-Defense Claims Are Targets of Prosecution

(By Associated Press)

PAWNEE, Okla., Feb. 19—The twin pleas of insanity and self-defense became targets for the prosecution today in the murder trial of Phil Kennamer, 19-year-old son of Federal Judge Franklin E. Kennamer.

Dr. Sidney Born, whose own son met a mysterious death after the Thanksgiving night slaying of John Gorrell, for which Kennamer is on trial, was a rebuttal witness for the state. So were teachers and former associates of the defendant who yesterday brought the trial to a climax with his three-hour appearance on the witness stand.

Under direct examination of C. B. Stuart, who used to bounce the defendant on his knee and tell him bedtime stories, young Kennamer answered all questions calmly, even volunteering answers after his counsel had overruled him.

In great detail Stuart had the husky, well-dressed defendant tell of his association with Gorrell and of how he acted to thwart an alleged plot to harm Miss Virginia Wilcox, pretty 19-year-old Tulsa oil heiress.

"Do you love her?" he was asked.

"Yes," he replied almost inaudibly.

Miss Wilcox sat on the front row, watching every move of the defendant. Last week as a defense witness she told of how she had scorned his attentions.

The defense contends Kennamer went temporarily insane in his efforts to impress the girl he said he loved in the past, loves now and will always love." His attorneys say he shot the 23-year-old son of a prominent physician in self-defense while seeking to frustrate an alleged $20,000 extortion plot against her family.

DAVEY PUSHES WORKS PROGRAM

'Favorable Consideration' Promised by President Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Governor Davey of Ohio pushed his program of public works with new ardor today. He had assurances of President Roosevelt's "favorable consideration" of some of the projects.

Davey told the President of the proposed $30,000,000 Scioto-Sandusky conservancy district and a $10,000,000 program of improvement for Ohio's welfare institutions. He said the President promised to give the projects his consideration.

The President also heard of plans to build a tunnel out into Lake Erie to provide water for Toledo, of a proposal to improve and beautify the state's highways, of conservation and grade elimination projects.

Davey said the President was "not quite so encouraging" about the proposed Beaver-Mahoning canal to provide water transportation to the Ohio river from the Youngstown steel district.

The most ambitious of the items, the Scioto-Sandusky conservancy project, would extend from Lake Erie to the Ohio river and include 17 counties. Rep. William L. Fiesinger of Sandusky said he soon will call a meeting of representatives whose districts would be affected to push the project toward approval.

Before leaving Washington, the governor wants to see Federal Relief Director Harry L. Hopkins and J. Edgar Hoover, director of investigation for the department of justice.

He may fly back to Ohio, he said.

Youth Living Too Fast, Woman Says

WILMINGTON, O., Feb. 19.—Mrs. Jane Wilson is 99 years old and she desires, oh so eagerly, to reach 100.

Then, she said today, "I can tell these high-flying young people the story of my experience and make them understand what life means. That will make me happy."

"Grandma" Wilson, as they know her in nearby Westbro, will reach the century mark in November.

"I'll tell you," she confided. "This younger generation is living too fast. Boys and girls have too much leisure, too much time to get into mischief. No crime ever was committed when a person's mind was occupied with hard work."

Her second husband died 30 years ago. Five of her children are living, including Mrs. Ella Patton, Springfield. She has nine grand children and four great grandchildren.

Music for the evening will be offered by the Fairview pupils. Miss Marjorie McArtor will give a recitation.

WHOLESALE THEFT OF MEN'S APPAREL IS THIRD IN YEAR

Mistreatment of Mother Is Denied In Murder Probe

JEFFERSON, O., Feb. 19.—Sheriff Larry Benson denied today that Mrs. Olivia Lent, 34, had been mistreated while under questioning concerning the disappearance and death of her daughter, Rita, 3.

"Mrs. Lent was questioned at all times in my presence," the sheriff said, "and she was treated with due respect. The story she gave out concerning ill treatment is made up out of whole cloth and is a pure attempt on her part to get public sympathy."

Mrs. Lent said she had been questioned 17 hours without a rest following the discovery of her daughter's body in a lane, two miles from the Lent farm.

"It was terrible," she said. "They wouldn't let me sleep and when my head plopped on the top of the desk, they made me sit on a straight back chair in the center of the room."

Sheriff Benson said he intended to have a hand-writing expert examine a note, found under a doorway at the Lent farm seven weeks ago. It said, in part: "Call off the cops or your kid will be killed."

County authorities had been investigating the girl's disappearance since Nov. 22, when she walked away with a dog. The dog returned a few hours later. The girls body was found Saturday.

Medal Is Awarded To Ceramic Artist

(By Associated Press)

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 19—Frederick H. Rhead of East Liverpool, Ohio, a ceramic artist, will be awarded the Charles Fergus Binns Achievement medal at the annual American Ceramic society convention tonight.

Mr. Rhead will receive the honor for his work in design. The presentation will be made by Willard D. Richardson of Columbus, Ohio.

Richard Grant of Cincinnati told the art division in a paper that "ceramic material furnishes the most durable colors of any of the crafts for the blue-green section of the color circle, which lately has been found to have greater importance than formerly appreciated."

Escaped Prisoners Hunted In Texas

HOUSTON, Tex., Feb. 19—Six escaped prison farm inmates, conspicuously clad in white denim uniforms, were at large today after a successful break from a field at the Harlem state farm.

The only report on the fleeing group came from the vicinity near Hempstead, 50 miles north of here, where persons said they had been sighted.

The group, headed by Walter Hopkins, a convicted slayer, dragged guard R. A. Jones from his horse and disarmed him. They ran through the Brazos river bottoms to a nearby highway and commandeered an automobile from a Mexican. They were armed only with the guard's pistols.

Thieves Gain Entrance At Rear of Golden Eagle Store

GLASS SMASHED, LOCK IS BROKEN

Truck Probably Used To Haul Away Quantity of Merchandise

A varied assortment of men's wearing apparel, the value of which was estimated by Sol Greenberger, proprietor, at approximately $5,000, was taken from the Golden Eagle clothing store, South Broadway, between 7 and 11 p. m. Monday.

The robbery is the third at the store within the last year.

Apparently, the robbers backed a truck up against the rear door of the building, opening onto an alley. The door was securely locked, so the robbers broke through a window, according to police reports, and then knocked the lock off the door.

Working apparently with deliberation, the thieves looted whole cases of men's suits, overcoats and countless other articles of attire.

The theory is advanced that the looters waited until Merchant Policeman James Hassey completed his inspection of the store at 7 p. m., when he visited the rear of the building.

Mr. Greenberger today said he would be willing to offer a reward of as much as $500 if the major portion of the stolen merchandise is returned.

OHIO RECEIVES MORE U. S. FUNDS

Another Million Dollars Poured Into February Relief Work

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Feb. 19—The federal government today poured another million dollars into the February relief fund for Ohio. It was the fourth partial grant for the month and brought the total of federal funds sent to Ohio to $8,353,287, Relief Director W. A. Walls said. State and local funds aggregate another $2,000,000.

The first step in Governor Davey's program of using Ohio mined coal in state institutions was taken by Walls when he notified all county relief directors to discontinue sending further orders for coal to state headquarters after March 1. Next month, he said, county directors will be charged with purchasing locally coal needed for local uses.

Among the specifications given county directors for purchasing the coal was that preference shall be given dealers handling Ohio mined coal. All purchases must be by bid and contract, Walls said, and dealers must certify that they have complied with the NRA code. In counties where coal is hauled by truck direct from mines, Walls specified that preference in awarding contracts shall be given to concerns whose mine employes might be thrown on relief.

The federal relief budget of approximately $10,353,287 is larger in proportion than the January total of $10,749,404 when the shorter month is considered.

Towboat Grounded

EAST LIVERPOOL, Feb. 19.—The towboat Beacon, owned by the Pittsburgh Coal company, tugged for four hours and finally managed to pull itself out into the deep water of the Ohio river after going aground. Two barges of coal were abandoned.

Tip For Ford

SELIGMAN, Ariz., Feb. 19.—This is an open letter to Henry Ford. It goes to him first, and if he don't pay any attention to it, why then it goes to General Motors or any worth-while automobile manufacturer.

What this country needs is a high-centered automobile. You would be surprised at the amount of the United States that has not got a boulevard by their door. They make cars so low that you can't run over a fellow without hurting him and if you want to drive out of towns anywhere you got to use a span of mules.

Come on, Mr. Ford, do something for the country folks.

Yours,

Will Rogers

MILESTONE

Several weeks will pass before the supreme court's rulings in the gold cases can be digested completely. Their effect thereafter will be visible gradually throughout a period of years.

Although the purchasing power of money is not affected directly by the rulings, they are destined to leave an impress on the monetary system. Promises to pay never will be redeemable, even theoretically, in gold again. A familiar basis of stability has been given a final blow by the court's ruling that contractual promises to pay a debt in gold are not constitutional.

The gold clause in private bonds is made void by the decision. The Roosevelt administration arbitrarily ignored it on the grounds of expediency, and the supreme court has upheld the administration on grounds of constitutionality. The court has not gone so far in the matter of gold clauses in government bands. It does not declare them unconstitutional, but gets the same result by pointing out that holders of the bonds have no admissible claim for redress. Congress was prepared to deny redress to this class of bondholders had not the court done so.

The court's action amounts to acknowledgement of a right without permission to use a remedy. Holders of government bonds, the majority opinion points out, cannot show loss and have no claim, therefore. What would be the ruling if they could show loss? What will be the status of government bondholders if they can show loss at some future time?

The United States has set up a milestone on its monetary course. By so doing, it signifies the power of government to regulate the supply and value of money is greater than the hitherto assumed power of private citizens to protect themselves against fluctuations in the value of money by writing gold clauses in contracts. It is an unwelcome sign for those who have tried for generations to protect property rights against the actions of government.

The gold case rulings blend quickly into the trend of the times. The fact they were not surprising shows what powerful forces shaped the supreme court's decision—the same forces operative at large throughout the country. The court was ruling on a thing which had happened. The water which had passed under the bridge could not be made to flow backward. Legislation was not being made but criticized after many months of enforcement. Possibly the gold clause in contracts never should have been abrogated. The fact is, it was. The deed was beyond recall.

If it were possible to turn back time for the benefit of gold clause bondholders, fairness would necessitate similar benefits for the owners of houses, insurance policies and all other forms of investment. They, too, have been affected by the changing value of money.

The court's decision, therefore, was expedient. It removed all immediate danger of financial chaos. By upholding the government, the court strengthened the government. It made unnecessary the severe test of confidence which would have been inherent in measures to contravene the effect of an adverse ruling in the gold cases. By making the government judgment-proof against one great class of creditors, the court saved congress the trouble of what would have been a much criticized procedure.

The supreme court, itself, depended on its prestige in the gold case rulings, without adding to it. There was the familiar 5 to 4 division, with Chief Justice Hughes and Associates Brandeis, Cardozo, Roberts and Stone in the majority and Associate Justices Butler, McReynolds, Sutherland and Vandevanter in the minority. When the philosophy of one man becomes the turning point of so momentous a question as this was, the supreme court's decision necessarily is regarded as a matter of opinion, regardless of how binding it may be. Were it not for the court's priceless prestige and its unchallenged reputation for intellectual honesty, its opinion in such a close decision would bear no weight.

THE STARS SAY

For Wednesday, February 20

A very active and enterprising day is the presage based upon the predominant lunar and mutual aspects of important planets. There is likely to be much stirring in both business connections and in the personal life, with many cherished hopes and wishes forming in the picture in definite outline, despite some element of frustration, obstacle or delay in attaining the full measure of fulfillment.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of much activity and advancement upon the goal of heart's desire both in business relations and personal affiliations. There may be signs of delay, postponement and impendiment, but in the long run the achievement is substantial and definite, possibly thanks to the encouragement and sold support of kindly friends. Much pleasure is shown as well.

A child born on this day should be capable, industrious, enterprising and ambitious, successful in many lines by its talent and application. It should also be popular owing to its good disposition.

The Dionne quintuplets are the first serious threat to the prestige of the Floradora sextette.—Omaha World-Herald.

O. O. McINTYRE
NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 19—The Big Town is not even a minor thrill for the magazine editor, George Horace Lorimer. Although no further away than Philadelphia, he seldom makes a visit. His antipathy is not clearly defined. It rather hangs on the principles of "I do not love thee Dr. Fell—!"

There are many apocryphal stories that even when he goes to Boston or other points east he manages to route himself to avoid the metropolis. Although a number of his established writers are residents of New York, he has them come to the city of Brotherly Love. Or dispatches scouts.

While his indifference in later years has been passive, there was a time when his animosity took the form of arrangement with Irvin Cobb to cook up a series of critical articles, cleverly captioned: "Twixt the Bluff and the Sound!" He has softened a little, but not many S. E. P. stories glorify Gotham.

Most Philadelphians of his prominence belong to New York clubs, but he does not. His native city is Louisville, Ky., but formative years were spent in Chicago and, next to Philadelphia, that city is highest in his affections. Big New York dinners, planned for him, are always turned down.

Luchow's which has won gustatory hosannahs from Huneker, Mencken, Ben De Cassers and Paul Morand, is the last of the barny, dark-timbered restaurants specializing in German cooking and imported beers. Also thickly Teutonic waiters as old-fashioned as a rocking chair tidy. Its family parties on Sunday evenings often include Al Smith, Theodore Dreiser, Nathan Burkan and Bernard Baruch. The music is mostly Viennese waltzes with now and then an overtone of Wagner. The starter, there since the carriage days, is a Hogarth etching come to life. Everybody is "Cap."

Al Trahan, the stage rowdy-dowdy, has a wire hair terrier that's his constant companion. On a recent night, Trahan arrived from the theatre to find the dog had gorged on an upset box of candy filled with brandy, cordials, etc. In a word the pup was swacked. Trahan, while his midnight snack was prepared, took the pet out to walk off the jag, fell in with cronies and when they walked into a neighboring bar with a tipsy pooch everybody bought. Three hours later, Trahan arrived home. His wife looked him over coldly, put on her wraps and, grabbing him by the arm, exclaimed: "Now you are going for a walk!"

So little is the pipe smoked on New York streets that the wandering Englishman stoking up frequently causes a turning of heads. About the only public-behanged pipe smokers are Howard Chandler Christy, Bob Brinkerhoff and Christopher Morley. The cosmopolitan giddy-ap has made a city of cigarette smokers, who can snaffle a few quick puffs and flip the end away before flitting here and there. The prejudice against the pipe has driven it from the cafe and most of the club lounges.

Ben Bernie, averaging 20 a day, and George Jessel a similar number, even longer and blacker are likely the heaviest cigar smokers of the stage, next to Frisco. He is top. He touches off his first "heater" instantly upon awakening and thus it goes, puff, puff, puff, all day until bed time. He even smokes between bites at meals.

Add sudden mad ambitions: To rake a cane across the glass counter of a five and ten cent store.

Col. E. M. House has endured the first New York winter in many years. Usually he goes on a Mediterranean cruise or South. But this season writing engagements made it necessary to stay near the home base and he has come through it in good health. Most of Col. House's adult years have been devoted to a scrupulous regimen due to physical frailty. This makes his enormous activities in public affairs all the more remarkable. He adheres to a strict rule about rising early and retiring not later than 10:30. Every late afternoon he walks at least a mile with his Cairn. He is reputedly the most prodigious reader of historical works in America.

After dinner I was telling a few male guests of some of the bloods in our Ohio town. How they turned out Sunday mornings in high hats and Prince Alberts. At the mention of one in particular, a lady across the room observed, "He was our most celebrated whip!" and returned to her magazine. I caught it on the third bounce. He drove a grocery wagon.

Overweight Often Factor in "Phlebitis"

Phlebitis is the name given to the inflammation of a vein. This is a condition which is not uncommonly seen in individuals who are overfleshy and persons whose work requires prolonged standing or walking. Since phlebitis may complicate the condition familiarly known as "varicose veins," it is frequently confused with the latter. Sometimes it is thought to be the same ailment.

Dr. Copeland

What is called varicose veins is not an inflammation but is a trouble due to some distortion in the shape and size of the veins. The varicose vein has lost its elasticity. The blood sort of stagnates within it and causes the vein to bulge.

Neglect Is Dangerous

Phlebitis, as well as varicose veins, is usually found in the lower extremities. As a rule a vein of the thigh is involved but any vein of the body might be affected.

In phlebitis the pain is more acute. It is quite cutting, its severity depending upon the extent of the inflammation. It increases with walking and standing. Neglect of the trouble leads to marked swelling of the involved vein and the adjacent structures.

The condition may be accompanied by fever, chills and sweats. In pronounced cases sedatives and opiates are given to control the pain. Complete rest in bed with elevation of the inflamed limb on a pillow or pad gives the quickest relief. Cold compresses are helpful. Avoid all medications unless prescribed by your doctor. Bear in mind that salves or ointments may cause irritation and increase the inflammation.

After the acute inflammation subsides it is important to determine the underlying cause of the infection. Cure is only possible when that is found and removed.

Faulty Habits of Living

In many instances the inflammation can be traced to some center of infection within the body. For example, enlarged and diseased tonsils, infected teeth and nasal sinuses may be the real cause of phlebitis. All possible points of infection must be examined and treated.

Faulty habits of living, such as irregular eating hours, improperly balanced meals and neglected constipation, are other contributing factors. As I have stated, sufferers of varicose veins are very susceptible to phlebitis. They should make every effort to improve the general health and thus increase their resistance against inflammation and infection of the veins.

Answers to Health Queries

B. Q.—My daughter of eleven has had a pain in the back accompanied by chills every evening when she goes to bed. This condition has persisted for about three months. What would you advise?

A.—It would be impossible to diagnose this condition without making an examination. See your doctor and follow his advice regarding the necessary treatment. Be sure to locate any underlying infection.

Mrs. S. Q.—What would cause a severe pain just below the stomach, leaving a sore feeling after the pain subsides? It does not seem to be gas.

A.—Make sure there is no tendency to colitis. Watch your diet and elimination. Avoid harsh foods. Keep the system clear. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

The quotation for yesterday was: "Old thoughts of wisdom we must daily treasure, hence business comes today and next month pleasure."

Continuing the year's subject for study, "Home," the roll call response was "Handy Kitchen Gadgets," followed by a paper, "The Evolution of the Kitchen," by Mrs. R. L. Smith, and a talk on "Sugar and Spice, a Part of the Fragrance from the Orient," by Mrs. Ross Todd.

3-Act Play Will Feature Masons' Fete

"Latch Strings for Ladies," a three-act comedy by Claudia Harris, will be a feature of the Washington birthday party and dance to be held at the Masonic temple Friday evening. The play, to be given from 8 to 9, will be presented by the Loyal Women's class of the Christian church.

The scene of the story is laid in an American city, with action on the terrace of the home of Dorothea McNaughton, who is discussing "mothers" with her grandmother, a placid lady of 70, and a neighbor, Mary Dunn.

Dorothea's mother, Mrs. Winnie Kennedy, and Mary Dunn's mother, Mrs. Alice Minton, both commonplace middle-aged women, have had the routine of their quiet lives upset by Grace Reeves Bradley Curtis, a gay divorcee on the lookout for her fourth husband.

The plot centers about the philanderings of Mrs. Kennedy and her daughter Sallee, who are planning to break into the radio and movie worlds. Many amusing incidents develop from their attempts to "live their own lives."

The characters are as follows: "Gram," Mrs. Jane Martin, a widow of 70, played by Mrs. Cora Schwartz; Mrs. Winona Kennedy, a widow and 'Gram's" daughter, Mrs. Ross Clay; Frances Kennedy, a teacher, Mrs. Charles Fineran; Dorothea McNaughton and Sallee Kennedy, the daughters of Mrs. Winnie Kennedy, Mrs. C. F. Evans and Mrs. Balford Dixson, respectively; Grace Reeves Bradley Curtis, a divorcee, Mrs. A. L. Getz; Mary Dunn, a young mother of twins and the daughter of Alice Minton, Mrs. Kennedy's girlhood friend, Mrs. C. E. O'Hara; Alice Minton, the girlhood friend, Mrs. Margaret Mossup; Boots Bradley, an athletic girl and the divorcee's daughter, Miss Ann Painter; Katie, an Irish maid, Mrs. Virginia Courtney; Mme. Heinemann Schubert, a teacher of singing, Mrs. Gertrude Cook.

Jack Bernhart's orchestra, with Miss Ellen Evans, blues singer; "Noock" Oswalt, entertainer, and "The Singing Trio," will provide the music for the dance in the ballroom from 9 to 12. For those who prefer playing cards to dancing, there will be games arranged in the club rooms.

High Court To Get Logan Gas Dispute

COLUMBUS, Feb. 19.—A possibility that the Logan gas rate case will go before the state supreme court arose today as representatives of 16 Ohio cities and towns gathered here to consider action on the public utilities commission's decision in favor of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co.

Through the commission's decision the communities lost a bitter 10-year fight for lower rates and refunds of almost $3,000,000.

Wesley Grills, Lorain city solicitor, said he believed the commission should have provided a rate of less than 45 cents a thousand cubic feet.

Other cities to be represented include Athens and Marion.

He requested that his "life" be restored and that he be granted his portion of his father's estate which long ago had been awarded to a sister, now dead. Hull said he had been in many places, including China, Russia and Japan.

Woman, 72, Reaches Own Gold Decision

CINCINNATI, Feb. 19.—A 73-year-old Negro woman, who had "done become destitute," reached a "gold decision" of her own.

She decided to cash a $1,000 gold certificate at a Cincinnati bank. She convinced Col. Harry H. Buck of the U. S. secret service, he reported later, that she knew nothing of President Roosevelt's order, making it an offense to have gold in one's possession. She explained, he said, the note represented a part of savings and had been concealed in a trunk since 1912.

The case will be referred to District Attorney Francis Canny, Buck added.

When you need an excuse to stay a little longer....

I'm your best friend

I am your Lucky Strike

I give you the mildest smoke, the best-tasting smoke. You wonder what makes me different. I'll tell you. It's center leaves. I spurn the little, sticky, top leaves . . . so bitter to the taste. I scorn the coarse bottom leaves, so harsh and unappetizing. I am careful of your friendship, for I am made only of the mild, fragrant, expensive center leaves.

Future Tax Program Depends On Revenue

CINCINNATI, Feb. 19.—Revenue accruing to the state from the sales tax will largely determine Ohio's future tax program, Lieut. Governor Harold G. Mosier, Cleveland, told members of the Cincinnati Duckworth club here last night.

The current session of the general assembly, he added, has been marked by "more investigation than legislation," and predicted there would be one more session, "probably next fall."

Future Lawsuits On Bonds Are Seen In Gold Verdict

prehensive summary of the gold decisions to its embassies abroad so they could inform other governments.

The discussion on the verdict promised to be almost endless. The majority, headed by Chief Justice Hughes, ruled that congress had power to nullify the gold clause in private contracts; that a gold certificate is worth only its face value in devalued currency, and that while congress had no right to abrogate the clause in government bonds, a bondholder could not collect more than the face value in devalued dollars unless he showed actual damage.

Comment On Minority

There was also much comment on the minority decision, rendered by Justices McReynolds, Butler, Van Devanter and Sutherland. Justice McReynolds, departing from the written opinion, used language of a strength rarely heard in the court chamber. His remarks that "the constitution is gone" and "this is Nero at his worst" brought varying reactions. Former Representative James M. Beck of Pennsylvania, widely known as a constitutional lawyer, praised the McReynolds' opinion as "powerful and moving." He said the majority decision impaired the "sanctity of contracts" and opened the way for "the inflationists."

Senator Thomas, on the other hand, remarked that he would like to get a stenographic copy of the McReynolds address because it was more typical of the senate than the courtroom.

In the hurry and confusion as the complicated decisions were interpreted, observers almost overlooked a dissenting opinion by Justice Stone. Standing with the "liberals," in the cases in which they upheld the new deal, he went even further and argued that congress could wipe out the gold clause in government bonds.

Collecting Is Something Else

The majority, while holding that congress could not do this, ruled that the question of collecting more than the face value of bonds in terms of devalued dollar was another matter.

"As a remedy for breach of contract," they said, "plaintiff can recover no more than the loss he has suffered and of which he may rightfully complain. He is not entitled to be enriched."

The court, in effect, held that buying power must be considered in determining losses. This led to the speculation as to how a bondholder would fare if, at some future time, he could show that the new deal dollars he receives for his bond buy much less than the money he invested.

The particular bond at issue in the test case, it was pointed out, was bought in war-time when prices were high.

Wall street agreed in the main that the practical effect of this adverse part of the court's ruling, for the near future at least, probably would be nil. Nevertheless, some legal and financial experts saw in this part of the decision a rebuke to congress which they thought might have a considerable moral effect, and induce caution in future legislation.

May Prove Damage

They also saw the possibility that at some future date a holder of a federal gold bond might be able to prove damage, and thus in effect substantially increase the volume of the government's debt.

A number of banking quarters expressed doubt, however, that the federal government would ever have to pay on these obligations in terms of the old dollar. They pointed out that congress could legally forbid the court of claims from entertaining such suits, for the government can be sued only with its own permission.

Conservatives who sought to minimize the new deal victory pointed out that the government won by a 5 to 4 decision.

and the appointment with Justice Trenchard today cancelled.

Fisher Demands Action

Reilly's announcement inspired Fisher to declare:

"He's gone one step too far. I can't conceive why any one should wish to adjourn this case when the man is scheduled to die within four weeks."

Reilly, in New York, retorted:

"He (Hauptmann) can't have Fisher and Reilly. I am sick and tired of this double-crossing at Flemington.

"Before I go any further in this case, I intend to see Hauptmann or Mrs. Hauptmann and find out whom he wants to represent him at Trenton. Nothing is going to happen to Hauptmann in a day or two."

Hauptmann, who has sworn he is a pauper, displayed impatience at any suggestion of delay.

certificates now held in their vaults.

3. Speeding up the purchase of silver by the treasury, paying for it with silver certificates or gold, and issuing silver certificates against it on the basis of $1.29 an ounce.

Permitting the acceptance of silver in the settlement of international balances.

Would Cheapen Dollar

Thomas said his amendment would mean less than a billion dollars in new money. But, he contended, it would cheapen the dollar and raise the price of silver.

When the market price reached $1.29 and the treasury was opened to free coinage, Thomas said, "we will then be ready to propose an international agreement for bimetalism."

Senator Wheeler (D. Mont.) expected to introduce today a proposal to pay the cost of the $4,880,000,000 program by issuing United states notes.

The administration men gathered their forces to fight an amendment by Senator Adams (D. Colo.) to cut the bill to $2,880,000,000. Backed by a group of Democrats and Republicans, he planned to push this change today.

Battle Over Land

KENTON, Feb. 19.—Fourteen acres were a bone of content on today as a result of the Kenton city solicitor's action in filing suit to recover $12,400 used by the school board in the purchase of land. Board members, blocked by a temporary restraining order seeking to stop payment on $12,400 worth of bonds which financed the purchase, contended they issued the bonds under authority granted in 1920.

Plead Not Guilty

MARYSVILLE, O., Feb. 19.—Ivan Phillips, 27, and George Bump, 40, both of Delaware, charged with participating in the $20,000 holdup of the Marysville Commercial bank last Dec. 27, were held today in $10,000 bond each.

They pleaded not guilty when arraigned yesterday. They were identified as the robbers by J. W. Lentz, president of the bank, Sheriff William Rauch said.

Still On the Job

LONDON, Feb. 19.—"I'll continue in charge until I am formally relieved," W. F. Amrine, superintendent of the London prison farm, asserted, as he made known neither Governor Davey nor Mrs. Margaret Allman, state welfare director, has formally accepted his resignation. Amrine resigned after Mrs. Allman asked him to submit the political affiliations of his employes.

GEHRIG SIGNS WITH YANKEES

One-Year Contract Is Believed To Call For About $30,000

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Lou Gehrig, the New York Yankees crown prince of swat, today signed a one-year contract for a figure popularly supposed to be around $30,000, a compromise between the reported offer of $27,000 and his own demand of $35,000 for 1935.

The agreement was announced after a short conference among Gehrig, Col. Jacob Ruppert, Yankee owner, and Edward G. Barrow, Yankee business manager.

It was the first time the Colonel and Barrow ever found it necessary to go through with the formality of a conference, press attended, with their slugging first baseman such as always marked the love feats between the Colonel and Babe Ruth.

By today's action, however, Gehrig becomes the highest paid of the Yankees regulars and by virtue of that and his home-run hitting of last year—he led the majors with 49—ascends to the throne occupied for so long by Ruth.

The signing precedes by only one day the arrival of Ruth.

Cuyahoga County Votes On 2 Levies

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, Feb. 19.—Voters of Cuyahoga county today expressed their will on two tax levies—one to provide funds for the relief of Cuyahoga county's unfortunates, the other to help the city of Cleveland over an embarrassing financial hump.

The county has proposed a special levy of 2.3 mills for financing relief and welfare activities. The city asks approval of a 4.4 mills levy to finance current obligations.

Between 150,000 and 180,000 voters were expected to cast ballots. Both city and county officials expressed confidence of victory. A majority vote is enough to pass each levy.

If the levies are approved, the city's tax rate for 1935 will be the same as the rate for 1934—$2.99 for each $100 property valuation.

ONLY 3 MINOR CHANGES MADE IN GRID CODE

Rules Body turns Thumbs Down On Modified Form Of Basketball

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—With only three minor changes, the national football rules committee has approved the sport as it is played and for the first time in its 30-year existence failed to adopt a major alteration.

Following a three-day session at Absecon, N. J., William S. Langford, secretary of the rules governing body, announced the committee had turned thumbs down on the majority of the proposed changes, which would have turned the game into a modified form of basketball.

Qualify "Dead Ball" Rule

One concession was made to the advocates of greater latitude for the passing attack. The so-called "dead ball" rule was qualified so that a runner who is on his feet even though held by an opponent, may pass or kick until the whistle is blown.

"This," said the committee's statement, "will give a runner who has been tackled but not thrown a somewhat greater opportunity to break away or make a pass, which will further encourage the open game."

It is hoped the modification will discourage too-hasty blowing of the whistle, the only change suggested by the coaches' rules recommendations committee.

Efforts to minimize existing penalties on attempted lateral passes or to permit forward passing from any point behind the line of scrimmage as in professional football failed to impress the committee.

Cover Technicalities

The other two alterations are designed to cover technicalities in the existing rules. One clarifies the rules governing the interchanging of linemen and backs by defining the positions of the center, guards and tackles as "those occupied by these players when they originally entered the game, with the further provision that the field captain must designate, upon request of officials, which players actually are the linemen.

The general rule under which fouls committed by both teams offset each other was changed to include the following except on:

"Should a punted ball be illegally touched (downed) and then there be a personal foul by opponents, the captain of the kicking team may refuse the offsetting penalty. In such case the ball would belong to the receiving team at the spot where it was allegedly touched."

Out of the wind-swept plains of Kansas has come a veritable cyclone of the links, who has been sweeping through the Winter golf tourneys, leaving amazement and consternation in his wake.

Young Harold "Jug" McSpaden, Kansas City pro, has flashed across the blue of the golfing sky like some blazing comet bursting forth with sudden brilliance.

A few months ago McSpaden, practically unknown, was left out of consideration when the experts were doping the probable winners of the various money events. Runyan, Laffoon, Sarazen, Cooper, Thomson and the rest of the top-notch pros were tabbed as the probable big money winners of the Winter trek, and nobody gave a thought to the serious-faced young Kansan.

When McSpaden came from nowhere to top a scintillating field of Bob Harlow's links wizards in the Pasadena Open, the boys just passed it off as one of those startling upsets which makes golf such a treacherous game for form-players.

However, Mac came right back and spread-eagled the whole troupe of touring pros in the next major event, searing the grass off the links with as hot a display of golf as the Coast links followers have seen in years.

This was the Sacramento Open tournament; and when "Jug" went right on to battle his way to victory in the gruelling match play events of the San Francisco Open, everybody was ready to admit that a new star had appeared in the golfing constellation.

McSpaden's total winnings from those three tourneys amounted to $3,250, which is no trifle as far as Winter golf earnings go. Last year Paul Runyan cleaned up a total of $6,767.91 to lead the money winners, and young McSpaden is off to a fine start in his current attempt to surpass the White Plains Watchcharm's mark. Don't forget Mac in that Bobby Jones tournament next month, boys.

PURDUE TRIMS INDIANA, KEEPS LEAD IN BIG 10

Illinois Beats O. S. U., Ties Indiana For Third Place

By WILLIAM WEEKES, Associated Press Sports Writer.

CHICAGO, Feb. 19—Purdue has taken full charge of the job of keeping the Big Ten basketball title safe for the State of Indiana.

Paced by the amazing shooting of Bob Kessler, the Boilermakers conquered Indiana university, 44 to 38, last night. They remained in first place with seven victories and one defeat, while Indiana dropped down among the long shot possibilities.

Illinois Ties Indiana

Wisconsin clung to second place, ranking as the Boilermakers' foremost challengers, by squeezing out a 28 to 27 decision over Minnesota. Illinois defeated Ohio State, 43 to 36, to join Indiana in a tie for third place, while Northwestern outpointed Michigan, 26 to 16, going into a tie with the Wolverines for eighth position.

Kessler turned in a new season scoring mark of 23 points for one game and assured Bill Haarlow of Chicago of competition for the individual title. Haarlow, who set the previous game mark of 22 points against Minnesota, still led today with 112 points, to 97 for Kessler. The Boilermaker ace, however, had played in eight games to nine for Haarlow, and had almost as good an average.

Another Record

Another season record turned up when 12,500 turned out to watch Wisconsin and Minnesota battle at Minneapolis. Minnesota led by two points at the half, but the Gophers' hope of an upset triumph was wrecked in the final half minute when Rolf Poser dropped in a field goal for the Badgers.

Illinois had little trouble with Ohio State, although the Buckeyes staged a sparkling, but brief, rally in the second period.

The Northwestern-Michigan game was a dull affair.

The standing:

The change in dates is made to avoid conflict with the wrestling matches billed Thursday in the Memorial gym.

TOKYO—Jake Schaefer, world's balkline billiards champion, may visit Japan in the spring for a series of meets with Japanese players, it is reported here by the Japan Billiard association. Negotiations are under way to bring him to Tokyo.

TWENTY GRAND AND EQUIPOISE RACE FAVORITES

21 Thoroughbreds Listed to Start In Santa Anita Handicap

(By Associated Press)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 19—Chances were good today for 21 thoroughbreds to start in the Santa Anita handicap with its added money of $100,000 but Equipoise remained the horse to beat.

This fact was emphasized yesterday when Cavalcade was declared and Ekky went out to beat a classy field of probable starters in the big race, only to suffer disqualification.

Equipoise, running in his second prepping event, bumped Twenty Grand badly as he came charging off the last turn and went ahead to finish a length in front of his old rival.

The stewards decided the king of the turf was guilty of a foul. It was fitting that Twenty Grand should be victor, for the 7-year-old son of St. Germans had raced valiantly, taking the lead at the start and holding it until the stretch run. His showing indicated he will definitely go Saturday.

On the basis of performances here, there appeared to be nothing available that could head off the great C. V. Whitney runner except disqualification. Yesterday's setdown was his third as he showed a recurrence of a habit of lugging at the rail.

SAUGUS, Mass.—Emily Davis, 16, Saugus High school sophomore, holds no brief for mashers, and instead of a slap in the face, they will get a well-directed punch in the jaw from her. She has enrolled as the first girl student in ERA Boxing Instructor George Gregson's class.

New Engine Seen As Yank Threat To Speed Honors

(By Associated Press)

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 19—Development of a revolutionary motor by American manufacturers, under the auspices of the United States government, may end Great Britain's land speed supremacy even more definitely than consistently bad weather has hated Sir Malcolm Campbell and his great racing car Bluebird.

By the end of 1936 there is every possibility that no matter what speed the Englishman makes above the present record of 272.108, it will be slow as compared with the aims of a radically new power plant, now under development at the factories of two of the automobile industry's largest engine manufacturers.

Specifications for this motor, a man close to the situation told The Associated Press today, were issued secretly by the United States war department. The engine, so flat that it will fit into an airplane wing, is not over a yard long, weighs comparatively little, must have no more than 12 cylinders set in two banks, and develops close to 2,000 horsepower.

Already, it was reported, one manufacturer has succeeded in developing 158 horsepower in a single cylinder, a total for the engine of 1,896 horsepower.

Campbell's British engine, developed with government assistance, is rated at 2,500 horsepower, but its weight contributes a large part of the more than six tons of rolling weight that is Bluebird in action.

The American car these engineers envisage will have two of the small motors, developing a total of 4,000 horsepower.

Sebring Player Leads Scoring In Tri-County Loop

ALLIANCE, Feb. 19.—Chalking up 17 points in games against Columbiana and Newton Falls last week Arthur Wahl, Sebring McKinley forward, regained the top rung on the ladder in the Tri-county league individual scoring race. Wahl has collected 127 points in 14 games.

Wahl now has a seven-point lead over Harold Nichols of Minerva whom he displaced as leader. Nichols was idle last week.

Both Wahl and Nichols will play their final games of the season this week. Wahl will see action against Lisbon and Ravenna while Nichols will face Boardman and Carrollton.

"THE LADY DANCES" by MARGE STANLEY

CHAPTER XXVI

Mark plunged into the green combers, moving with great, flashing strokes out toward the open sea. He rose and fell with the rise and fall of the waters; riding high up on the crest, and sliding smoothly into the trough. He reveled in his strength, in the cool, salty feel of the sea, in the swift slurring of waters past his face. Far out he paused, looking back at the remote beach.

Vanya was standing on tiptoe at the very edge of the surf, her upraised arm glistening in the sun. A faint cry drifted thin and elusive on the wind.

"Mark! Mark! Come back!"

He turned and raced back through the great rollers. Now the waves came from behind; they lifted him high up for a moment, carried him on, and then sled rapidly away toward the white beach. He plunged on, slipping through the water as smoothly as an otter.

In the surf he dropped his feet, found bottom, and ran in toward Vanya, standing knee-deep in the water. Her face was white, troubled; he thought he saw the flash of tears.

"What's the matter? What's wrong?" he cried, as he emerged dripping. The girl ran to meet him, and, regardless of the nonchalant Loring in the distance, threw herself into his arms.

"What happened?" he repeated

"You went out so far!" she choked. "I could hardly see you. Every wave hid your head, and I couldn't see it until the next one."

"Good Lord, girl!" he exclaimed. "Is that all? I can swim!"

"I know it—now," she said, throwing back her head and smiling up at him. "I've never seen anything more beautiful, more graceful! It was thrilling until — until I began to get frightened."

They waded back to the warmth and dryness of the beach, rounding the curve, and seating themselves on the bole of the giant windfall.

"Were you really so worried?" he asked.

"Mark! Do you think I lied that day?"

"When you said you loved me? No."

"I've never lied to you. I wish you'd believe that, but I suppose you couldn't, and still be—'

"And still be what?"

"And still be Mark Talbot! I know you doubt the story I told you, but it's true."

"If I could believe that," he said fiercely, "if I could believe that—and also that you've held nothing back—not even this thing could stand me back!"

"Not even what thing, Mark?"

"Your acceptance of that damnable proposition I made you! That speaks for itself, doesn't it?"

"Mark—!"

"Don't make it worse by explanations, Vanya! Didn't you know I offered that as a test? I'd have seen you into America all the more gladly had you refused!"

"Good Heaven, Mark, but you're cruel sometimes," she murmured as she dropped to the sand.

The voices of shouting men greeted them as they approached the bay. A strange vessel lay at anchor in the curve of the inlet.

An Offer

"What a climate!" muttered Mark, hopping his streaming forehead. "All it needs is a few devils with pitchforks, bloking up the flames."

"Everything's here but the pitchforks, then," agreed Loring, gazing around the bar-room, and pounding his half-drained glass on the table. "There are the devils." He indicated the crew of the pearler Caroline, fresh from the islands that named her, who sat in the humid, smoke-filled, airless room.

"It's a burning shame," said Mark, "to expect those girls to work in this heat!"

"Those girls? You mean Vanya."

"Of course I mean Vanya! The others can steam themselves like clams for all of me." He stared moodily at Vanya's co-performers, now each sitting at a table with the seamen. Loring called lustily for another drink from the scowling Hong.

"Well, it can't be helped," sighed the beachcomber, "How'd you like my technique?"

"On the piano? You're pretty good. I'd appreciate it more except for this heat."

He wiped his face with a handkerchief grown almost wringing wet in service.

"One gets accustomed to it," said Loring indifferently. He caught a gesture from Shene. "Here goes again! Our friend the lady is about to appear."

He slid over to the piano, and again struck those surprisingly melodious chords. Mark watched Vanya step from the door behind Loring to the small raised platform; she stood hardly half a dozen feet from his table, wearing the long black evening gown affair she had worn for the delectation of the Elice's crew. Something about her appearance displeased Mark; her make-up was different, her cheeks an enameled pink, and her lips a lacquered red. She met his eye with a faint smile as she began to sing.

"Mean to Me!" she sang—a song Mark had heard back in the States. She caught his eye in the midst of it, flashed him a tiny smile of implication, and continued. Mark grinned to himself at her look; he didn't blame her at all.

After her encore, Vanya ignored as usual the crowd's invitations. She came gravely over to Mark's table amid a roar of appreciation from the Caroline's crew; her action was evidently expected! Loring reached over and removed the remains of his drink; he set the glass beside him on the piano, and retained his seat, playing a soft, unobtrusive melody. Vanya looked tired, weary, beneath the false glow of her make-up.

"You'd look better," observed Mark, "in just ordinary rouge and lipstick, or with nothing on your face at all. I don't fancy that grease-paint, or whatever it is you have on!"

"Ordinary rouge and lipstick won't stand this weather," replied the girl. "And besides, I make up to satisfy the customers—not you!"

"I'm a customer," stressed Mark. "The only way to satisfy me would be to discontinue the balance of tonight's performance. I don't see how you can stand it. I suffer enough just sitting here."

"It is bad," said Vanya, wearily. "I'm minded to speak to Shene."

"You'll do nothing of the sort. I've gone on in worse weather than this."

"But Vanya! It's worth it to me to pay him what this crowd would spend. I'll buy him off."

"You will not! Do you think I'd take charity from you? I can manage without that."

One of the other girls was on the platform; Mark looked at her face, beaded with perspiration from the effort of her dance.

"Vanya, as a particular favor, will you let me try?" he said softly. "My reasons are selfish! I'd feel a great deal happier if you would."

The girl shook her head.

"Don't think I'm unappreciative," she said, "but I can't let you."

Nor did she. Shortly thereafter she disappeared into the room that served as a dressing room, and returned in her costume of crimson blouse and tiny black velvet shorts.

Her dance was a repetition of her first dance for the crew of the Elice—a wild, gypsy-like movement; yet there was a difference. Her steps were the same, there was the same grace of form and motion, but something had changed. She did not lose herself in the dance; she moved carefully and correctly, but the old abandonment to the joy of rhythm was lacking. Was it, Mark wondered, the heat, or was it—possibly—the result of his statement on the beach; his assertion that her audience watched her body, not her dance? She was trying desperately hard; everything was there but the spirit.

Nevertheless, her audience approved; she bowed and gave her usual encore. Mark tore his eyes reluctantly from the lure of her lithe body, and watched the faces of the sailors about him.

Like automatons, he saw their eyes shift in unison as they followed her. Like puppets moved by the same string, their eyes moved right, left, up, down, at the girl's movements. And what he saw in their faces angered him. They had no right to be watching Vanya like that—the agile grace of her body, the curves of her slender figure, the black sheen of silk on her slim legs! No right! And he'd see to it!

Vanya bowed, forced a wan smile, and retired to the dressing room with just a weary glance at Mark. Loring came back to the table with a shout for Hong and a drink. He slipped into the chair with a mutter of dissatisfaction at Hong's slowness.

"What's Vanya doing?" queried Mark.

"Resting. That dance of hers is real work."

"I don't see how she stands it."

"Nor I," aid Loring. "These slender girls have an inconvelvable amount of vitality.'

"She seemed tired."

"She did. I hardly thought she'd be able to finish."

"Lord" groaned Mark. "I'm going in to see her."

"Let her rest,' suggested Loring, but Mark had already departed.

He rapped on the door beyond the piano; the other girls were among the guests; Vanya must be alone. He entered at the faint, "Come in!"

Vanya was lying back in a canvas steamer chair, still in her dancing costume, with closed eyes. She opened them as Mark entered.

"Mark!" she gasped.

"Keep still!" he ordered glancing about the room. On another chair he spied the tattered vagabond costume she had worn before in her second dance.

"Do you expect to dance again tonight?"

"Of course, Mark. I must."

"But you're not going to."

"Please, Mark! Let's not argue."

"You're not going to dance! Tonight, and then again tomorrow night—"

"There won't be any tomorrow night. The Caroline sails at noon with the tide."

"It makes no difference, Vanya! You're not dancing again tonight. It isn't only the heat! It's the avid crowd out there, ogling you dressed like this—" He indicated the long curves of her legs. "I won't have it, and I'm not—"

"All right, Mark! All right!" cut in the girl desperately. "I'll sing instead! Will that satisfy you?"

"It'll have to," growled Mark. "All the same, I don't like that crowd of scum gaping at you. I'll get out now, and you change."

"Silly" Vanya smiled, though somewhat wearily. "Do you think I change costumes between each number? That dress comes quite to the floor; I slip it on over this."

"Then I'll stay until you go on." He tossed the costume of tatters to another chair and sat down, drawing his chair beside her.

"I can't help it, Vanya!" he continued. "The sight of those faces, with their eyes following every move you made—I wanted to punch their leering mouths! The grinning apes!"

"Isn't it strange that it didn't bother you last time I danced?"

"But it did! I was too wrapped up in watching you myself to know it."

"But, Mark, there will be other ships in. You can't act like this every time—I've got to live, you know."

"Not by dancing!"

"But I must!"

"Not at all! I've an idea—I wanted to talk to you about it tonight. A very simple and reasonable solution."

"Mark, honey," said Vanya, would you mind telling me about it tomorrow? I'd like to turn in as soon as I'm through here. I can't think tonight—kiss me, and let it rest till tomorrow."

Just as their lips met, Loring rapped his summons on the door.

NATURAL LAXATIVE FOOD WINS NATION

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Helps Millions to Regular Habits

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is one of the most popular laxative foods in the country today. Millions have found it thoroughly satisfactory for correcting constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.

In addition to its popular approval, ALL-BRAN has been accepted by science. Research shows it offers mild "bulk" to aid elimination. Also vitamin B and iron.

The American Medical Association Committee on Foods has granted Kellogg's ALL-BRAN its Seal of Acceptance. This delicious cereal is also approved by Good Housekeeping Institute.

Within the body, ALL-BRAN forms a soft mass which gently clears out the intestinal wastes. More effective than the "bulk" in fruits and vegetables, as it does not break down in the body.

Isn't this food better than patent medicines? Unlike cathartics, it remains effective with continued use. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. ALL-BRAN is much more satisfactory than part-bran products. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Double Bill At State Wednesday; "Bengal Lancer" Ends Run Tonight

FOLLOWING the custom of having at least one double bill feature a week, the State has scheduled two good features for showing Wednesday and Thursday. The first picture is the much discussed "The President Vanishes," starring Arthur Byron and the second is entitled "Society Doctor" with Chester Morris returning to the screen in the lead role.

Mys'ery, Suspense

"The President Vanishes" is slightly reminiscent of the musical comedy "Of Thee I Sing." The latter lampooned high governmental moguls with biting satire. The picture, however, gives a startling behind-the-scenes expose of a group of money-mad industrial magnates and senators who almost push the country into international war to protect their selfish interests. Some of it is propaganda, of course, and some of it is disturbingly realistic. One may recognize some of the characters. But the greatest attribute of the film is its suspense — there's plenty of it and oodles of excitement that isn't expected by its title. The parts are handled by a cast of competent actors. Arthur Byron in the title role plays it with poise and conviction.

The supporting cast, too, is splendid with high honors going to Edward Arnold for his part as the secretary of war. Paul Kelly is grand as the secret service man and others include Rosalind Russell (The countess in "The Night Is Young"), Peggy Conklin, Sidney Blackmer, Edward Ellis, Andy Devine and Osgood Perkins.

ANOTHER good cast is to be seen in the second film, "Society Doctor." Chester Morris is supported by Virginia Bruce, Robert Taylor, Billie Burke, Raymond Walburn, Henry Kolker, Dorothy Peterson, Mary Jo Matthews, William Henry, Donald Meek and Louise Henry.

Hospital Locale

It tells the story of Dr. Morgan, young chief interne in an emergency hospital and of his friendly rival, Dr. Ellis. That hints a triangle. Well, the third party is a nurse, Madge Wilson. However, Morgan doesn't believe he is well enough off financially to wed and so he backs out and leaves the way clear for Ellis.

Billie Burke

Morgan is lifted from the hospital for operating too hastily upon a patient. He is invited to set himself up in private practice with the backing of a wealthy patient, played by Miss Burke—and he accepts.

Although Madge—Miss Bruce—loves Morgan she believes it futile and when Ellis asks her to marry him she accepts. But there are many incidents yet to bring about the ending you know will occur. With machine gun rapidity a policeman is seriously shot by a gangster, posing as the son of a woman patient. Taken to see his "dying mother" by the policeman, the woman, who is none other than his sweetheart, hands him a revolver. The gangster in his attempted flight shoots Dr. Morgan. The wife of the wounded policeman shoots the gangster.

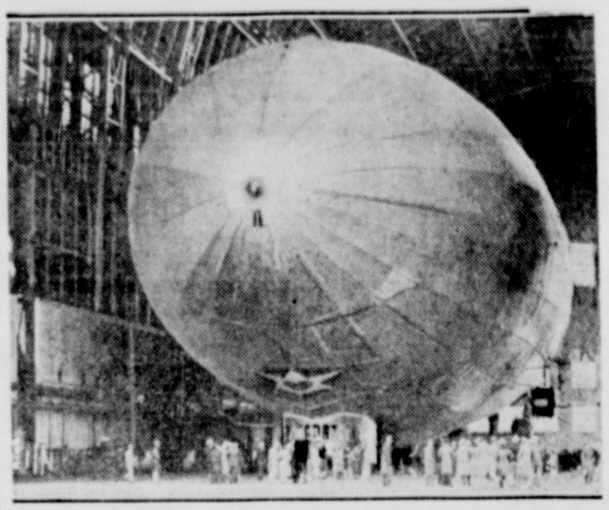

Still more amazing incidents occur in the would be quiet corridors of the hospital but they finally wind themselves around to form the happy ending.

ONE of the screen's finest productions is ending its three day run this evening at the State theater. It is "Lives Of A Bengal Lancer" with a splendid cast including Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell, Sir Guy Standing, Kathleen Burke, C. Aubrey Smith, Monte Blue and J. Carrol Naish.

A Review of the Day's News

—By Arthur Brisbane—

YOU HAVE read about "war with germs" in the next great outburst.

India proves that it could be done. At Alipore two are condemned to death, convicted of "germ murder." As rich Amerendra Nath Pandey walked along the street, he felt a prick, a sharp stab. He cried out. A germ poisoner had injected plague germs into his blood.

Amerendra died. His murderers were his step-brother and his doctor. Two other doctors, accused, were acquitted.

A well-organized germ war could be disagreeable, distributing disease germs above great cities and in reservoirs, from planes.

OTHER KINDS of war, nearer home, are also disagreeable. A union of public utilities employes warns New York that it proposes to cut off all light from streets and houses in Brooklyn, Queens and Manhattan, south of Fourteenth Street. That would be good news for burglars, uncomfortable for citizens.

A new union of elevator operators and general "house service men" promises New York to call out 200,000 men, tie up all elevators, shut off heat, close stores, hotels, theaters, office buildings and cripple apartment houses.

Unions consist of organized men, cities of disorganized masses of citizens. Politicians fear well-organized bodies, pay little attention to forgetful, disorganized masses of citizens.

Some day someone may organize the citizens, as Mussolini did in Italy, Hitler in Germany, Stalin in Russian, Kemal in Turkey. That is called fascism, which follows the demonstrated inability of the people to protest themselves against well organized minorities.

One pleasant feature of fascism is its refusal to recognize the rights of union labor, or let its leaders go on collecting dues. Under Mussolini, a labor leader gets a pick and shovel, no traveling expenses, no union salary.

AT LEYDEN, in Holland, scientists have produced a degree of cold said to approach within one-five-thousandth of a degree of absolute zero.

A gigantic electro-magnet, in combination with liquid helium, produces the lowest temperature ever known on earth.

The lowest possible degree of cold, the absolute zero, would be minus 273 degrees Centigrade, or minus 459.6 Fahrenheit. At least science thinks so. It used to call the atom "smallest fragment of matter."

Science needs "absolute zero," to help in tearing apart the atom, now known to be a miniature solar system.

BOSTON—When it came to fitting Joseph W. Martin, Jr., 18-year-old Marine recruit, with shoes, the U. S. Navy found itself all at sea. The youth's foot size was 13, and the biggest shoes the Navy or Army could supply were size 12. Martin, 6 feet 3 inches tall, weighing 210, made his first trip to sea barefoot, but finally an order for special tailoring and shoemaking was sent to Washington.

BOSTON—There are 24,340,000 automobiles registered in the United States, according to a survey by the First National bank of Boston. This represents 72 per cent of the total for the world.

WHY Didn't the Snow Melt on SMITH'S House?

Here's a startling clue. Jones uses 25% more fuel than Smith, yet his house is cold and d aughty. (The heat has gone out through the roof.) And in summer, Smith's house is 6 to 12 degrees cooler than Jones'.

The answer is simple: Johns-Manville Rock Wool Home Insulation, the scientific home insulating material—installed between the attic floor beams.

Are you one of the lucky ones with an open attic? If so, let us tell you about J-M Home Insulation! No obligation!
